Mr. Claudy's essay was an especially interesting one, outlining Wagner's motives and discussing at length the individual points in this particular composition. "Wagner," Mr. Claudy declared, "with Mozart, Haydn and Beethoven, forms a chain of German composers that the combined forces of the musical world can not excel."

Mr. Higginbottom's work at the aeolian was especially noteworthy. In the numbers allotted to him on the program he evidenced his mastery of the instrument and gave to the compositions the Mr. and Mrs. Asa W.
